ABOUT SAAC

The Southern Alternatives Agricultural Cooperative (SAAC), located in rural southwest Georgia, is the only African-American-owned pecan-shelling facility in the United States — and it is run by women.

In 2004, when the Federation of Southern Cooperatives and the Southern Rural Black Women's Initiative, two organizations dedicated to promoting social and economic justice for rural African-American communities in the South, wanted to develop local enterprises, they approached Carrie Thomas to run the plant. At that time, the plant was not operational and neither Thomas nor her team knew anything about processing pecans. But today, SAAC is thriving as a worker- and farmer-owned cooperative that processes pecans for sale through domestic fair trade and sells a variety of delicious pecan candies.

SAAC's leaders are determined to run the plant in a way that creates new jobs for workers, while strengthening the local economy and empowering small-scale African-American farmers. By training and employing local people, they are building pride and stability in their community.

UUSC's Economic Justice Program strengthens the movement for workers' rights in the United States and overseas by partnering with grassroots groups that are improving wages and working conditions for workers, farmers, traders, and their families. SAAC became a UUSC partner in 2008 and has since received $37,000 through the Small Farmer Fund. The seed-grant funds have supported SAAC in building their business capacity and connecting to customers, like you, who make consumer choices based on their values.

Georgia-Grown Pecans & Pecan Candies

Southern Alternatives Agricultural Cooperative, a cooperative led by African-American women, buys pecans grown by its member farmers and then processes the pecans in its shelling facility located in Leslie, Georgia.
