

CLIMATE JUSTICE SUNDAY

Communities throughout the world, including here in the United States, are facing threats to their water access as a result of climate change. In Kenya, communities near the Kakamega rain forest are experiencing periods of drought and of excessive rainfall, which wreak havoc on crops. In California, 800,000 people are being affected by drought and contaminated water.

Climate Justice Sunday is a program of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee (UUSC). Through Climate Justice Sunday, you can learn about water issues in your own community and help people in Kenya and California to protect their water supplies in the face of climate change.

To learn more about Climate Justice Sunday, including the Blue Buckets campaign and related activities, visit uusc.org/climate-justice-sunday.

For a full list of Climate Justice Sunday resources, visit uusc.org/climate-justice-sunday-resources.

To make a donation in support of communities in Kenya and California, visit uusc.org/climatedonate or send a check to the following:

 UUSC Justice Sunday
PO Box 808
Newark, NJ 07101-0808

PART OF THE COMMIT²
RESPOND
INITIATIVE

Climate Justice Sunday connects us with larger Unitarian Universalist efforts to promote climate justice this spring. Climate Justice Sunday is part of Commit2Respond, the new climate justice initiative led by Unitarian Universalist groups throughout our faith movement.

uusc.org/justicesunday • justicesunday@uusc.org

CLIMATE JUSTICE SUNDAY

Communities throughout the world, including here in the United States, are facing threats to their water access as a result of climate change. In Kenya, communities near the Kakamega rain forest are experiencing periods of drought and of excessive rainfall, which wreak havoc on crops. In California, 800,000 people are being affected by drought and contaminated water.

Climate Justice Sunday is a program of the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee (UUSC). Through Climate Justice Sunday, you can learn about water issues in your own community and help people in Kenya and California to protect their water supplies in the face of climate change.

To learn more about Climate Justice Sunday, including the Blue Buckets campaign and related activities, visit uusc.org/climate-justice-sunday.

For a full list of Climate Justice Sunday resources, visit uusc.org/climate-justice-sunday-resources.

To make a donation in support of communities in Kenya and California, visit uusc.org/climatedonate or send a check to the following:

 UUSC Justice Sunday
PO Box 808
Newark, NJ 07101-0808

PART OF THE
COMMIT²
RESPOND
INITIATIVE

Climate Justice Sunday connects us with larger Unitarian Universalist efforts to promote climate justice this spring. Climate Justice Sunday is part of Commit2Respond, the new climate justice initiative led by Unitarian Universalist groups throughout our faith movement.

uusc.org/justicesunday • justicesunday@uusc.org